This is an example of a standard pen tool. Like brushes, pen tools are useful for various effects. The Pen tool itself is used to select and create the path of a shape. You can then apply special effects, or paint. You can choose from different shapes, such as Rectangle, Rectangular Selection, Rounded Rectangle, Line, Ellipse, Round Rectangle, Freeform, Polygon, Polyline, Polygonal Selection and Freeform Line. This is an example of a freeform brush. Freeform brushes allow you to manipulate a color, size and opacity. Using this tool you can paint on top of any area of an image. If you want to create a brush, you can do so with the New Brush tool. Instead of selecting a shape, you can select a color from the Color palette and choose a brush type from the Brush Shape panel. There are five different brush types: Round, Arc, Square, Polygon, and Line. You can then tweak the brush with the Brush Properties panel. You can change the size, hardness and flow of the brush, as well as the color used. You can change the size of the brush by using the brush holder on the top of the tool and dragging the sides of the brush. Additionally, you can drag the middle of the brush in order to make a larger brush with a smaller diameter. The Eraser tool allows you to remove unwanted objects in an image. You can use it to erase unwanted white space or delete unwanted shapes that you don't want. It has several options: Erase Edge, Erase To Background, Erase Contiguous, Erase Bright, Erase All, Erase Alpha. The Erase All option removes everything in an image, whereas the Erase Alpha option removes all objects from an image except the ones with the same color as the active selection. You can use the Eraser tool to erase or remove unwanted objects. The Gradient tool allows you to fill an area with a specific color gradient. You can use the linear gradient to create a color change from one color to another over a range of values. You can also use the radial gradient, which is used to create a circular gradient with an inner and outer circle of a specific color. You can use the Gradient panel to choose from several gradient configurations. This allows you to change the start and end colors for each gradient line. Additionally, you can change the color
