[Erythrocyte aggregation in the stasis syndrome and the alcoholic syndrome]. The aggregation behavior of erythrocytes in arterial and venous blood has been investigated with respect to the stasis syndromes of hypertension and diabetes as well as to their complication, namely a systemic collapse in chronic alcohol intoxication. In all cases the primary stasis is due to hyperviscous plasma. It can be shown that at the end of a series of venous compressions the aggregates which could not be dissolved after the 4th treatment in controls may also be dissolved by the patient's oedema. Under the influence of alcohol the aggregation behavior is quite similar to the primary stasis; while in the case of hypertension and diabetes arterial aggregates are reduced after these diseases the primary stasis is reduced only under conditions of chronic alcohol intoxication. The anti-inflammatory and analgesic effects of melatonin in patients with fibromyalgia syndrome: a double-blind randomized placebo-controlled clinical trial. Fibromyalgia syndrome (FM) is a common musculoskeletal pain syndrome, associated with sleep and fatigue disturbances. The syndrome is characterized by widespread musculoskeletal pain, stiffness, fatigue, sore throat, and cognitive disturbances. A recent multidisciplinary review indicated that fibromyalgia is a neurobiological condition in which the peripheral and central nervous systems are both involved. The present study investigated the anti-inflammatory and analgesic effects of melatonin in patients with FM. Patients were randomly assigned to either melatonin (10 mg, 5 mg, or 3 mg) or placebo (saline) for five consecutive days. Pain sensitivity, pain tolerance, fatigue, sleep quality, inflammation and hematologic parameters were assessed. The present study showed that treatment with 3 mg or 10 mg melatonin attenuated pain sensitivity with high pain tolerance and reduced fatigue when compared to placebo (saline). Serum level of inflammatory cytokines (interleukin-6 and tumor necrosis factor-alpha) were significantly lower in patients treated with 10 mg melatonin when compared to placebo. These results suggest that melatonin may be useful in the management of FM because it relieves the symptoms associated with the syndrome.
